TESTING JELLY MAKES SUCCESS

By BIDDY BYE.
Jelly making is the most troublesome of all preserving processes. Too little or too much sugar will always spoil the jelly.
To tell just how much sugar should be used with each kind of juice, place a teaspoonful of juice in a glass and add 1 spoonful of 95 per cent. grain alcohol.
Shake the glass gently to mix, then pour slowly and watch how the pectin—that is the substance in fruits that makes them jelly—is precipitated. If the precipitation is in one lump, a cup of sugar may be used for each of juice. Should the precipitation be in several lumps the sugar should be three-fourths the amount of juice.

Should no precipitation be shown the juice is not adapted to jelly making and should be mixed with apple or other juice rich in pectin.
